The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clear anticipated by Niki et al.(4,181,749).

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Niki et al (4,181,749).

Niki discloses a process for making surimi. First surimi is described as a fish meat sol. At column 2, lines 53-58, example 1, lines 40-45 and column 6, lines 39-63 the process is described to include all of the process steps of claims 1-3. Briefly, minced fish meat is centrifuged to separate liquid from the denser solid portion of the meat. Then the supernatant liquid is washed with water a few times, heated to 90C for 5 minutes and centrifuged to remove the solid portion of the composition. The precipitate was recovered. The liquid fraction was concentrated 5X and then used as a salt solution to in a subsequent process to wash the denser solid portion of the fish meat. Then the denser portion of the fish meat and the heat precipitated portion of the fish meat were combined together. Finally the treated fish meat was packed in a tube and heated to 90C for 30 minutes and formed a gel. The claims appear to differ in the recitation that the dense fraction was "capable of being frozen" but it is well known in the art to preserve food by freezing it. Thus one of ordinary skill in the art would have expected that the fish could be frozen. The claims also appear to differ in the recitation of a mold but no unobvious or unexpected difference is seen between a "tube" and a "mold". It is appreciated that extrusion is not mentioned but no unobvious or unexpected result is seen from the mode by which the product is heat set. Finally to adjust the ratio of liquid fraction to dense fraction would have been an obvious way to alter the overall composition of the product. One of ordinary skill in the art would have expected that the final gel would be either isotropic or anisotropic.

Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

It is unclear if the additional ingredients in step b and c are intended to be included or excluded from the composition. An amendment to the claims canceling "optionally" would overcome the rejection.
